Located surrounding Charles C Jacobus Park on the eastern end of Wauwatosa, the Charles Jacobus Park neighborhood is known for its many neighborhood events, close-knit community, and wide variety of charming homes along quiet residential streets. Jacobus Park is a hidden gem in Wauwatosa, and you may want to allow extra time to follow some of the trails and paths through the wooded and scenic park. The park was named for Charles Jacobus, a Wauwatosa businessman and county park commissioner. The area along the Menomonee River once was home to the short-lived Castalia Brewery (1893-1898).

Wells St. is unusually wide because it accommodated the streetcar line from downtown Milwaukee into the Tosa Village, until 1958. The site of the Cedar Street Condominiums was once the site of the Salvation Army's Martha Washington Home for Unwed Mothers. The facility closed in 1979, and the building was razed.
